Temple Emeth to Discuss The Effects of Sputnik

TEANECK—A symposium on "Sputnik's Effect on the American Educational System" will be presented Friday evening, after the regular evening service at Temple Emeth. The topic was prompted by growing concern over our national security, and the growing emphasis on scientific and engineering education.

The speakers will be Professor Reed W. Zemansky, chairman of the Physics Department of C.C.N.Y. and Professor Bertram Epstein, director of Educational Research at C.C.N.Y. Stuart S. Bowen, chairman of the Temple Social Action Committee will serve as moderator.

Professor Zemansky was graduated from C.C.N.Y. He earned his Ph. D. at Columbia University. Subsequently he did research work at Princeton University and at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute in Berlin. Except for a trip around the world in 1934, and war work in 1942-1945, Professor Zemansky has been at C.C.N.Y. continuously.

Professor Epstein has had a long career in the field of education. A graduate of C.C.N.Y., he received his Ph.D. in Educational Research from Teachers College of Columbia University. He is Associate Professor of Education, and Director of Educational Research at C.C.N.Y.

The discussion will embrace a comparison of the Russian educational system and the American educational system. It will cover areas of the American system as they may be affected by Russian scientific advances, and will consider the emphasis on scientific education and its relationship to the liberal arts and the social sciences. The audience will be invited to ask questions from the floor.
