THE members of the Math Club, under the able leadership of Mr. George Becker, are learning newer and more accurate shortcuts in mathematics. Many alumni of the Math Club, who have attended college, return each year to thank Mr. Becker and to express the value of these teachings.

This year's members learn how to build magic squares, multiply numbers just by glancing at the digits, square any number by a short, simple process, and solve many difficult problems.

Active Atoms

DURING this time of national defense and emergency, Active Atoms became consumer conscious. Forty-six students studied consumer chemistry, analyzing both the product contents and advertising methods. This phase of chemistry supplemented class work.
