15 Allied Ships Lost In Invasion Landings

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 13.—Six American and British destroyers were lost in landing operations in France, the U. S. Navy Department and the British Admiralty announced tonight.

Total naval losses announced were 15 vessels, seven American and eight British. Several thousand ships were involved in the landings.

The former Grace liner Santa Clara, renamed the transport Susan B. Anthony, also was lost by American naval forces along with the minesweeper Tide, the destroyer escort Rich and the fleet tug Partridge.

The Susan B. Anthony was a $4,187,500 liner of 8183 gross tons, 400 naval personnel aboard still built in 1930. She was 483 feet long.

The American destroyers were the Cory and Glennon, built in the 1940-41 program, and the Meredith. President Roosevelt announced soon after the landings that two destroyers had been lost. He did not name them.

Three British destroyers announced lost by the Admiralty were the Boadicea, Swift and Svenner. The British also announced the loss of the frigates Mourne, Blackwood and Lawford, the trawler Lord Austin and the auxiliary Minster.

Troops Saved As Ship Sinks.

The Susan B. Anthony sank in the Channel while carrying troops to France without the loss of a soldier. Some 50 or more of the 400 naval personnel aboard still are unreported, but most are believed safe.

Survivors said few of the soldiers even got their feet wet and they were saved with their field packs and small arms by rescue ships which swarmed to the scene.

Lt. W. H. Hutchison, 7832 22nd, Flushing, N. Y., a navigator, said the rescue job "certainly rates with that of the President Coolidge in the South Pacific."

Only United States skipper lost was Lt. Cmdr. Allard Barnwell Heyward of the 890-ton minesweeper Tide. His mother lives in Charleston, S. C.

The other survivors included Cmdr. Thomas L. Gray, 878 Grange Road, Teaneck, N. J., commanding the Susan B. Anthony.

Elaborate preparations had been made by the Navy Department for release of the news here at 2:30 p. m., EDT, supposedly coincident with release of British losses in London. But Gen. Eisenhower made the announcement of both United States and British naval losses nearly 90 minutes ahead of the time scheduled here and the first naval authorities knew of it was when they saw the news come over tickers.

M/SGT. HARRY G. CARROLL

CARROLL WINS ANOTHER RATING

Teaneck Resident Named Master Sergeant

Harry G. Carroll, son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Carroll, 8 Livingston Place, Teaneck, who is serving as a non-commissioned officer in charge of the A-2 section of the 13th A.A.F. Fighter Command in the South West Pacific, has been promoted from technical to master sergeant.

In August of 1942, Sergeant Carroll voluntarily took a break from sergeant to corporal so he could ship into the overseas theater. Since that time he has risen steadily to his present rank.

Sergeant Carroll has been in one major campaign against the Japanese and is authorized to wear a Battle Star on his Asiatic Pacific Theater ribbon. He holds the Good Conduct Medal.

While at one South Pacific base Sergeant Carroll's unit was shelled by Jap artillery. He has been the target of Japanese bombs at four different bases.

A graduate of Federalsburg High School, Sergeant Carroll was formerly an International Business Machine operator for the Chemical Bank and Trust Company of New York City.
