

THIS past year the Math Club, under the able leadership of its president, Charles Lee, and the guidance of Mr. Becker, its adviser, had one of its most successful years. Every week the club met to be given problems for solution and at the same time to present their solutions for the past week's problems. These problems were generally mathematical sticklers involving knowledge of the many branches of mathematics. All the members were benefited when Mr. Becker explained short cuts for the solution of the problems. In the spring the club sent some of its best mathematicians to the annual mathematics contest held at N. Y. U.

The officers for 1939-40 were: Charles Lee, president; Vincent Murray, secretary-treasurer.

Seated (left to right): A. Hanniball, C. Lee, Mr. G. Becker, R. Leech, R. Loh, R. Weidener.

Standing (left to right): B. Romaine, H. Locatelli, R. Lowrie, K. Williams, G. Brazda, C. Pruett, T. Jennings, G. Hossfield, R. Burgess.

Math Club

First row (left to right): L. Rugge, R. Holcombe, K. Williams, Mr. Kroner, H. Sieg, R. Roberson, V. Murray, A. Hanniball, R. Weidener, B. Romaine.

Second row (left to right): R. Bernstorf, O. Frick, E. Kelley, B. Palmer, E. Teutsch, E. Schwarz, T. Jennings, R. Robbins, W. Platt.

Third row (left to right): G. Hossfield, G. Thornley, C. Pruett, R. Bolinder, W. Hartman, R. Leech.

Active Atoms

THE Active Atoms is formed for all chemistry and physics students who are eager to learn more about their respective sciences than the regular classroom periods and laboratory work afford.

This year the club, immediately after its first monthly meeting, arranged to do original experiments on many popular food products, to take several trips to interesting places related to the chemical industries, and to have lectures presented by Mr. Kroner, chemistry teacher and club sponsor, who has a large, valuable collection of colored and black and white movies and slides.

The officers for this year were: Kenneth Williams, president; Robert Roberson, vice-president; and Helene Sieg, secretary-treasurer.