Lieut. Johnson Tells Bergen College

Painting a picture of the Japanese pilot-prisoners as educated, fearless fighters, many sporting fraternity pins from America's leading Universities, First Lieutenant Arnold E. ("Skid") Johnson, a member of Bergen College's second graduating class, returned to the scene of his Collegiate days yesterday morning to tell of his experiences under fire from Japanese Zeros.

"Skid" said the average American believes the Japs to be barbaric youths rather than the clever, skilled fighters they are.

JAPS HAVE SKILL

"I was never so annoyed in my life," Johnson said, "a day Zero did a clever slow roll before he opened fire at me," in answer to a student's query as to the skill of the enemy pilots.

Johnson spoke at an informal Christmas celebration in his honor in the Bergen College Lounge. One hundred and sixty undergraduates and former instructors gave him a standing ovation. He said he was pleased at the welcome, but said he had nearly done his duty the same as everyone else is doing while under fire.

Johnson dispelled the notion held on the Continent that the Jap is not a formidable fighter with the flat vocalist Chris. Yes, the Jap in action, especially in the air, is a more formidable warrior than Generalissimo.

He recalled an experience in Hawaii several days after the Pearl Harbor attack. He was on patrol over the island when he sighted a Japanese submarine. He followed the boat as it was listed about the water. He was dying about 50 feet above the submarine when he dropped three 1,000-pound bombs.

The explosion from the three bombs nearly knocked the plane out of the air because they were dropped from a few hundred feet. Climbing up higher, he dropped a heavier load of bombs, and at which time the enemy ship went down.

"We knew exactly where the submarine was. We knew that civilians on the home front are talking about it all the time when compared with the hundreds of thousands of military men that we are saving," Johnson said.

He wonders how many American and Japanese pilots will be left standing after the war when compared to the importance of having trained and kept in shape men that are the real fighters of the future.

"The Japanese pilot is a pilot. He is an educated man. He is a member of the A.T.C., and he is a gentleman," Johnson said, "and the average American believes the Japs are barbaric youths rather than the clever, skilled fighters they are."

Tasked for African Offensive, Awaiting 3 Months

Seaman First Class William E. Zwicker of 304 Montgomery Avenue, Teaneck, is home on furlough for the first time since his enlistment in the Navy a year ago. He had been at sea 15 months and took part in the expeditionary force operations in North Africa. On Africa his ship was one casualty in the coral reef near Casablanca's shore because. Later this cruiser engaged the enemy in four night actions. Zwicker is carport of the ship's newspaper. He enlisted at 17 on December 14, 1941, and said that his only intention was to get into the Navy and then get out. His father, a veteran of World War I, was proud during his service.

November 26, the Saturday night of the disastrous Boston night club fire, when the band of the General Staff was known for its roping and conviviality, the murmur of the crowd filled the room. The sound of music and the clinking of glasses echoed throughout the venue. Suddenly, a commotion broke out as the crowd became aware of the tragedy unfolding outside. The fire erupted, engulfing the building and claiming numerous lives. Amidst the chaos, a fireman named Zwicker, a graduate of Teaneck High School in 1935, was among the first to arrive on the scene.

For 15 years a perfect attendance student, Zwicker was a radio striker aboard the sunk-sea ship when an enemy torpedo was sighted. "I ran back a short time after," Zwicker said. Survivors were picked up by a destroyer and brought back to a West Coast port. He and his radio officer were aboard the sunk ship when an enemy torpedo was sighted. "We were made to jump into the water, but I managed to escape unhurt," Zwicker recounted.

As if that wasn't sufficient, after he was rescued, he was sent back to his barracks and then to a West Coast port. He

Before joining the Navy, he was employed by the Gary Electric Company and the First Jersey City Bank. He is the former St. Leonard's School, where he went to Sunday School.
