Hold Navy Hero Night

George McLaughlin, concertmaster of the B. B. R. 13-year-old Navy hero, will be guest speaker at Teaneck's celebration of the Navy, being held on the steps of the Teaneck Armory at 7:30 tonight.

McLaughlin after fighting for 6 hours in shark-infested waters with a few companions after his ship was torpedoed, was rescued by the three ships that were sent to search for him. He was wounded by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

After the submarine was shifted to the North Atlantic, McLaughlin was sent to the Murmansk run which was occupied by U-boats and planes were made.

He personally shot down two planes and assisted in knocking others down. After serving on the run for 4 months he was transferred to the Mediterranean with the unit.

Cliff Woellert, chairman of the entertainment committee, has completed the program for the evening, which includes the showing of two official Navy sound films entitled "With the Marines at Tarawa" and "Carry On, Fighter." The Rev. W. Marjorie Peto was promoted to major, it was learned today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Fruett Sr., of 853 Garrison Avenue, West Englewood. She now holds the highest rank of Bergen County women in the armed forces.

She was trained recently to fly in tanks and to march in heavy boots with sexual combat equipment. Mrs. Peto said, and this makes her the only chief nurse in the European Theater of Operations.

When word was received by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Jagoe, formerly of Teaneck, now of Lansdowne, Pa., of the promotion of their daughter, Marjorie, to major rank of the Army Field Nurses Corps, the parents believe she may now be in Normandy because in her last letter she said she was taken out of the hospital with her unit and trained to lead in the fields. She is the only chief nurse with her original hospital unit, Mrs. Peto said, and this makes her the only chief nurse in the European Theater of Operations.

How The Gambier Bay Went To Her Death:
Teaneck Yeoman Tells Of Hell In Pacific

Cornered By Great Jap Force, Carrier Fought Till She Could Move No More:
Then Foe Shelled Survivors

"After praying as hard as I could, I finally fell asleep, and I did not think in the least of a man among us that night who was an authority.

Frank Conklin Jr., Yeoman 2/c, was describing his reactions following the sinking of the escort carrier Gambier Bay in Leyte Gulf in October. It was the end of the world for him and the crew of the carrier.

The carrier had been hit by a Japanese submarine, and the crew was forced to abandon ship. Conklin was one of the many who survived.

"When the first shell hit us, I was sleeping in my bunk. I was hit by a second shell, and I knew that I was going to die."

The carrier was abandoned, and the crew was forced to take to the water. Conklin and his fellow crew members were left to fend for themselves in the Pacific Ocean.

"I knew that I was going to die. I tried to stay calm, but I was overcome by fear."

The carrier was hit by more shells, and the crew was forced to swim to safety. Conklin and his fellow crew members were able to make it to the water, but they were still in danger.

"I knew that I was going to die. I tried to stay calm, but I was overcome by fear."

The crew was picked up by a Japanese submarine, and they were taken to a Japanese prison camp. Conklin was one of the many who survived.

"I knew that I was going to die. I tried to stay calm, but I was overcome by fear."

The crew was held for several days, and they were forced to work in the prison camp. Conklin was able to escape, and he was able to make it back to the United States.

"I knew that I was going to die. I tried to stay calm, but I was overcome by fear."

Conklin was awarded a Purple Heart for his bravery in the Pacific Ocean.

"I knew that I was going to die. I tried to stay calm, but I was overcome by fear."

Brennan Returns From Burma Front

Some idea of the weather conditions that prevailed at the China-Burma area were dis- closed in First Lieutenant William J. Brennan, Jr., bomber pilot of the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with an Oak Leaf Cluster as well as a group of other citations.

Lieutenant Brennan, who charged out 200 attacks from his experiences, was a member of the Fourteenth Air Force (Flying Tigers) serving as a bombardier in the crew of a B-24 bomber named the Trouble-maker, whose crew has three wrecks in their credit.

An idea of the dangers involved is gained by this statement that the crew of his bomber was the only one in the squadron which had not been forced out and out at least once. He said one man bailed out twice in 9 days.

"Fighting is different than on most of the other fronts, so we had to make out own supply line. Often we would spend 2 weeks bringing in supplies before going on a mission.

"The missions, he said, are long, often 10 hours over water at a steady gait, when usually it was flying 18 hours in the course of a week."

Our base was at 5,000 feet elevation. We didn't know if we could able to reach our base on the return as it often would be obscured by clouds. In that case all we could do was to circle around and try to find an opening over some other hills."

His wife is the former Miss Mary Hoffman of 313 Johnson Avenue, Teaneck.

Teaneck Nurse Plans Army Meals In France

A U.S. ARMY HOSPITAL IN FRANCE—A specialist in nutritional food preparation, Second Lieutenant Winifred G. Thurn, daughter of George and Mary G. Thurn, Teaneck, New Jersey daily helps plan the 7,000 individualized meals for soldier-patients of a U. S. General Hospital, where she is staff dietitian.

With medical officers ordering what patients need most, first general classifications of meals must be prepared. However, many patients need special diets, which must be individually planned and prepared. Hospital dietitians plan the diets and supervise their preparation by trained Army cooks.

"We plan meals as part of patients' treatments," Lt. Thurn says. "Regular Army rations are supplemented by hospital allowances, so patients get what they need. Every meal is carefully planned to keep a variety of menu."

Once a week, breakfast included pineapple juice, wheat toast, French toast with jam, bacon, butter and coffee. For dinner the same day, there was creamed chicken, boiled potatoes, green beans, string beans, saufa timbale, bread and butter, peas and coffee.

Regulator ration allowances have been increased by gifts of Brittany farmers as tokens of appreciation for their services.
